

Market fresh sushi comes to Billingsgate

JAPANESE restaurant chain Feng Sushi is set to open its seventh eatery in Billingsgate fish market this month.

In consistence with other restaurants in the group, the interior will maintain its sophisticated and elegant style. However with enough seating for only six people, the restaurant will predominantly focus on its existing delivery and takeaway service. This will be catered for local homes and businesses in Canary Wharf and the neighbouring areas.

The finest quality sustainable fish sourced daily from the market itself will provide the menus traditional and modern sushi and sashimi, alongside seasonal specialties such as MSC mackerel donburi.

This is the chain's first launch since former Pizza Express chairman Luke Johnson bought a majority share in the business last autumn. Company co-founder Silla Bjerrum will still continue to be heavily involved in market activity, carrying out regular demonstrations and participating in events.

This launch is expected to be one of several in the next twelve months. Feng Sushi is expected to confirm details about an eighth London site shortly.
